PRAIRIE GROVE

METAL & SUPPLY

From the House, Shop or Barn...

We serve our customers with superior building products, and the most outstanding service experience possible!

Joe and the crew out there were just great to work with every step of the way if we had issues, they were quickly rectified and figured out. Wilber the person who built it was just awesome to work with if we had a little tweak or something we wanted to change I didn't throw a bunch of extra labor and money on the bill so he was very adaptable which was really important to us that Insulation is always best from them guys. It's really good and just really solid. All around. The lumber was good quality. The windows are excellent. The service was top-notch.

Josh

We can't say enough good things about Prairie Grove Metal & Supply! They truly brought our dream home to life with incredible craftsmanship and care. The entire team was professional, responsive, and went above and beyond to make sure every detail was perfect. Everything was delivered on time, and we're so happy we chose them.

Fun ways to close out summer

After a few months of fun in the sun, it can be difficult to admit that summer will soon be over. Lazy, hazy days likely filled the calendar, with time spent poolside or at a beach.

Just because summer is winding down doesn't mean that all the relaxing fun must cease. Families can extend the fun a little longer with these ideas that can help everyone ride the last of the summertime wave.

The fair is in town

The end of summer tends to be fair season. Fairs and carnivals offer an assortment of entertainment all under one roof (or tent). In fact, many people live a short drive away from a fairgrounds, and residents can check the schedule posted on a municipal website. Fairs also are commonly advertised in newspapers and on signage.

Fairs have rides, carnival games, livestock shows and contests, food on a stick, and musical performances. They can be ideal ways for families to find something fun everyone can enjoy.

Late-season vacation

When most families are gearing up to return to school and shopping for supplies and wardrobes, others may want to maximize the end of summer with a vacation. July tends to be a peak month for summer vacations. While August also is popular, prices and crowds tend to drop by late August, meaning families may be able to score good deals the longer they wait.

Local summer

In many beach towns, the crowds thin considerably after the Labor Day holiday. And beach entry fees may be waived after Labor Day. Families needn't say goodbye to seaside adventures just because the calendar flips from August to September. There are plenty of warm days still in store. In fact, waiting until the crowds dissipate can make local beach towns and amenities more enjoyable.

Camping out

A movie under the stars followed by an evening of camping out in the backyard or a nearby campsite can be an ideal way to close out summer. Everyone can listen to those late-summer crickets singing their tunes while fireflies light up the sky. While sitting around a campfire or firepit, everyone can take turns sharing what they loved most about the summer and what they're looking forward to doing in the weeks to come.

Summer may be singing a swan song, but there's still plenty of fun to be had in the waning weeks of this popular and fun season.

Simple ways to save in retirement

The importance of saving for retirement cannot be overstated. Expenses related to housing, transportation, medical care, and even recreational pursuits remain even after retirees are no longer earning a paycheck, and that underscores the need to build a sizable nest egg.

Running out of money in retirement is a legitimate fear for many retirees, including those who did what they could to save for their golden years. According to MetLife's 2026 Paycheck or Pot of Gold Study, 51 percent of retirees who invested in an employer's defined contribution (DC) plan worry about running out of money in retirement. And such fears are growing, as MetLife notes just 30 percent of retirees expressed similar fears in 2017. MetLife notes that rising health care costs and longer lifespans are behind such anxiety, which can be tempered when retirees embrace some simple ways to save.

- Get a library card. Many professionals aspire to read more in retirement, and this rewarding hobby can be free when retirees get a library card. Retirees can find more than books at their local libraries, which also loan out movies and sponsor free or low-cost programs for seniors. Such programs might offer financial advice for retirees or sponsor book clubs that serve as a fun and free recreational activity.

- Travel during off-peak seasons. According to a recent poll from RBC Wealth Management, 63 percent of respondents see travel as an important retirement goal. But more than half of those people feel the cost of travel could jeopardize those plans. But retirees can save on travel by choosing to vacation during off-peak times of year. Travel tends to peak at times of year when school is out, such as winter break, spring break and summer vacation. The costs of flights, lodging and rental cars tend to be particularly high during these in-demand seasons. Retirees have more freedom to travel whenever they choose, and they can use that to their financial advantage by avoiding peak travel seasons and saving on flights, hotels and other expenditures.

- Take advantage of senior discounts. A wide range of businesses and services offer discounts to senior consumers. Amazon offers more than 50 percent off its Prime membership to seniors receiving certain types of government assistance, and Walmart Plus offers a similar discount. In addition, retailers like Home Depot and Lowe's, Kohl's and Michael's also offer percentage-based discounts to seniors. Many popular chain restaurants also offer discounts to senior diners.

- Utilize credit card incentives. Many credit cards offer benefits like points or cash back incentives. Seniors who have the money to pay their balances in full can use credit cards when purchasing big-ticket items, and then use the travel rewards or cash back benefits to save money on expenses like flights and hotels. Cash back bonuses can be directed however seniors see fit.

The prospect of running out of money in retirement is a notable fear for many retirees. But some simple ways to save can help seniors keep more money in their pockets throughout retirement.

Hobbies to get seniors out and about

The threat posed by social isolation has been known to medical researchers and health care professionals for years, but the issue gained wider attention during the pandemic. Restrictions on social gatherings during the pandemic opened millions of people's eyes to the ill effects of social isolation, and while that threat proved temporary for the majority of people across the globe, many seniors continue to live largely isolated lives.

According to the Mayo Clinic, depression, anxiety, increased risk of suicide, and various chronic health problems are some of the outcomes associated with loneliness. That's a troubling assessment that becomes even more disconcerting when considering a general decline in socialization as evidenced by the 2021 American Perspectives Survey. Survey participants indicated they have fewer close friendships than they once did, speak with their friends less often and rely less on friends for personal support. That's challenging for adults of all ages, but it can be especially difficult for aging adults, who may be dealing with the loss of a spouse or other close confidantes they would otherwise rely on when confronting personal problems. Hobbies that promote socialization can help aging adults reestablish friendships and build new ones, paying dividends that can have a profound impact on their overall health.

With that in mind, adults who feel as though their social circles are shrinking in mid-life or in retirement can look to these activities as means to rebuilding their social lives.

- Book club: A book club offers multiple benefits to adults. Book clubs are inherently social and tend to bring like-minded individuals together, which can help build new and lasting friendships that extend beyond weekly discussions. A 2021 study published in the journal Neurology also linked regular reading to a lower risk of developing dementia.

- Sports: Sports provide another avenue to socialize with like-minded individuals. Golf is not a team sport, but it is typically played in groups of two or four, making it an ideal activity for adults with free time on their hands to get out and about and meet other people. Leagues for softball, bowling and pickleball also provide opportunities to socialize, and many adults are participating in such leagues for that very reason. A CivicScience study released in 2025 found that 49 percent of adults who planned to participate in adult recreational sports leagues were doing so for social interaction and the chance to make friends.

- Travel: Travel can provide another means for aging adults to make friends. Group tours to foreign countries, day trips to local attractions arranged by township recreational offices or even overseas trips with friends you've fallen out of touch with can be a great means to build new friendships and reinvigorate old ones, all the while getting you out of the house.

These are just some ways for men and women to get out of the house and socialize with others their age, a worthy endeavor that can be highly beneficial to adults' overall health.

How to plan a memorable, celebratory retirement party

Professionals spend years saving for retirement. Many enroll in an employer-sponsored retirement plan the moment they begin their careers in their early twenties, and continue to build their nest egg until the day they officially call it quits.

The effort people put into retirement planning makes the moment individuals call it a career worthy of an extraordinary celebration. The following retirement planning party tips can ensure a celebration that suits an occasion as significant as the day professionals call it a career.

- Pick a unique venue. Whether the party will be a sizable affair with a guest list that includes long-time colleagues and friends or a smaller gathering with a retiree's close knit inner circle, a unique venue underscores how significant a moment and achievement retirement is. For larger affairs, shop around for venues in much the same way you might when celebrating other milestones, such as a child's graduation from college or a wedding. If the guest list includes just a handful of friends and family members, consider planning a trip to a resort locale or renting an impressive home through a site like Airbnb or Vrbo.

- Take a stroll down Memory Lane. In the months leading up to the celebration, work with the retiree to identify key moments and people in his or her career. A photo montage of those notable moments and individuals can be a great way to commemorate a lengthy career and simultaneously thank and honor the people who helped along the way. Play the montage for guests at a key moment during the party.

- Ask colleagues to share well wishes. Brief messages from colleagues, whether they're delivered via handwritten letters or videos each individual films, can be a great way to show the guest of honor how much he or she meant to others throughout their careers. Messages can be incorporated into a montage video or shared privately with the guest of honor.

- Kick the curfew to the curb. It might have been a while since a newly minted retiree had a late night, but a retirement party can stretch into the wee hours. After all, the guest of honor won't need to wake up for work the next day (or any other day), so let invitees know that the party will keep going well into the night. If booking a venue for the party, plan an after party at your home for a handful of guests who are particularly close with the guest of honor.

- Keep the focus on fun. While reaching retirement is a celebratory moment that merits a good party, many retirees also feel a degree of sorrow because they're leaving behind rewarding careers they worked so hard to build. Such sentiments may not be entirely avoidable, but party planners can emphasize fun and a festive atmosphere to ensure the night is celebratory and not sorrowful. Book a band and submit a play list of the retiree's favorite songs, and encourage guests to dance the night away.

The day professionals reach retirement merits a celebration that's worthy of the years of hard work and dedication individuals put in over the course of their careers.

How seniors can remain physically and mentally active

Growing older is often equated with slowing down. Aging may be characterized as a period of decline marked by an inability to do the things you once did, but recent data indicates otherwise.

According to a report in the journal Geriatrics, a far more optimistic reality awaits seniors. Nearly 45 percent of people age 65 and older show measurable improvements in brain health, physical function or both over time when they take certain steps to promote physical and mental wellness.

Physical activity

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends 150 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic activity per week, supplemented by at least two days of muscle-strengthening exercises. Brisk walking or swimming can improve cardiovascular health and reduce the risk of stroke and hypertension, says the Massachusetts Council on Aging. Incorporating yoga or Tai Chi is vital for fall prevention, as it targets balance and flexibility. The CDC says improving joint mobility and balance can significantly extend the amount of time seniors can live independently. In addition, lifting light weights or using resistance bands helps combat age-related muscle loss, which is essential for maintaining metabolic health.

Cognitive advantages

Mental fitness is just as vital to seniors as physical fitness. According to the World Health Organization, routine cognitive stimulation enhances "brain capital," delaying the onset of dementia and Alzheimer's. Strategies for effective mental engagement include:

- Learning: Lifelong learning techniques include picking up a new language or learning an instrument. This helps strengthen neural pathways that allows the brain to reorganize itself even in later decades.

- Play games: Play isn't just for kids; games like chess or complex puzzles improve problem-solving and memory retention, according to Nixon Adult Day-care in Houston.

- Socialize: Isolation is a leading risk factor for cognitive decline, says the National Institutes of Health. Group activities like book clubs or community volunteering can offer emotional fulfillment and mental stimulation.

Power of positivity

Findings from a recent Yale University study indicated seniors with a positive outlook on aging were significantly more likely to show physical and mental improvements compared to those with negative perspectives. Psychological resilience is an important tool for seniors to stay healthy.

Movement, social interaction, stimulating activities, and a positive attitude can help seniors maintain overall health.
